'Turing's Got Talent' is a competition where pupils from Turing school (one of the four schools at Varndean,) can perform in front of an audience. Performances includes acts such as singing, dancing, playing a musical instrument, juggling and much more. All ticket proceeds were donated to The Clock Tower Sanctuary Day Centre; a charity which supports homeless young people.

The head judge was Paul Bazely also known as 'Troy,' an actor from the well-known television programme 'Benidorm.

The winners of 'Turing's Got Talent' were Mika Howard and Lauren Sayers. They performed a duet singing 'Jar Of Hearts,' a pop song written by Christina Perry.

Miss Mills, a cover supervisor and attendance officer, said that: "The acts were outstanding, the winning performers were incredible; they sang amazingly!"

Another member of staff, Miss Tester, who organised the whole event said she "wanted to include all parents, carers and staff so they could enjoy the evening." Miss Tester was thrilled by the performances and exclaimed: "I was so proud of everyone who took part."

We were lucky enough to interview Lauren Sayers, one of the two girls who won the competition, who said: "We were surprised because I only learnt the song that day because I was standing in for someone who was unfortunately ill on the day of the competition. It felt amazing when we won because Mika had never performed like that before or had any singing lessons so I feel like winning gave her a big boost in her confidence which made me feel so happy!"
